

An angler's paradise

The east side of Langeland is an angler's paradise. There are many good opportunities to catch trout along the coast, and plenty of cod in the Langeland Belt, many of which are quite large. But there are also good chances of catching flatfish and - at the right times - garfish. However, it is the large cod that attract most people, especially German visitors. One of them is Dietmar Zischkale from Dülmen.

In fact he was one of the first anglers to contact harbour master Jens Pedersen about getting a berth in the new marina. Since then he has come every year to catch cod in the Belt.

In 1994, he explains, he started sailing his new boat "Kaja", and it was a wonderful first season. The weather and the fishing were perfect.

I was lucky enough to catch my first fish over 20 kilos that year: he says. And since then he has had plenty of fine seasons with lots of good cod. His dream fish weighed 23.5 kilos, but he caught many others.

The fishing has slowed down a little, but that has given Dietmar Zischkale the urge to catch other fish than cod. So through the years he has also caught many flatfish and sea trout.

He is very fond of the atmosphere in the marina. It is clean and tidy. The marina and its surroundings are well-kept and there is a familiar atmosphere established by harbour master Jens Pedersen and his crew.

‘And as Dieter and his wife themselves write Wir wünschen dem Hafen sowie seiner Crew auch für die nächsten Jahre viel Glück und Erfolg und wir hoffen, dass wir auch noch ein wenig daran teilhaben dürfen.’

You can't put it any better than that!
